This newsletter provides an update on the partnership activity of the Fenland CSP.

Community Safety Partnerships (CSPs) are made up of representatives from the police, local authorities, fire and rescue services, health, and probation services. They are known as 'responsible authorities'. Other non-statutory bodies are also invited to be members e.g., residential social landlords.

CSP members work in partnership to tackle crime and antisocial behaviour and to reduce the communities fear of crime and anti-social behaviour.

The CSP page has resources to provide help and support on a wide range of topics, such as Scams, County Lines (drugs) and Hate Crime. Visit our CSP page by following this link:

Myths About Domestic Abuse

Domestic abuse only happens to women

The majority of victims of domestic abuse are women, but it can happen to men in both heterosexual and same sex relationships. Domestic abuse is also experienced by people who identify as transgender or non-gender.

Why doesn't she just leave?

Statistically, the most dangerous time for a female victim of domestic abuse is when she leaves her abuser – she is most likely to be murdered by him at this point.

There are also other significant issues to consider – leaving could mean giving up her job, losing contact with friends and family, if there are children they may have to change schools and leave their friends behind.

Alcohol and drugs cause domestic violence

Whilst there are links between people who have alcohol issues or who take drugs and domestic abuse, there is no evidence that alcohol or drugs cause domestic abuse. Domestic abuse is about having power and control over someone, whilst taking drugs or misusing alcohol may affect people in different ways, they do not make people become an abuser.

Domestic abuse only happens to people who live in bad areas

Anyone can be a victim of domestic abuse. It doesn't matter where you live, whether you have a job or not, how much money you earn, what your gender or sexual orientation is. People of all backgrounds, cultures and religions can experience domestic abuse.

If someone experiences violence as a child, they will grow up to be an abuser

It is acknowledged that children growing up in a violent home are affected in a number of ways and some children who experience abuse do go on to be abusive in their relationships. But this does not apply to everyone. Many people are repelled by violence because of what they witnessed as a child and the damage it causes. Using violence or controlling behaviour is a choice that abusers make.

The police don't respond to calls about a 'domestic'

Domestic violence is taken very seriously by the police. Officers receive training in how to respond to calls about domestic abuse and what they should do when arriving at the scene. Many forms of domestic abuse are a crime and the police can pursue a crime even without the consent of the victim.

S/he brings it on himself/herself

The victim is NEVER to blame for domestic abuse. There is no excuse for violent and abusive behaviour.

Domestic violence is a private matter, you shouldn't interfere in a marriage

Some people think that what goes on in the home is private, and they shouldn't get involved. This view is outdated and harmful. Domestic abuse can affect anyone and we all have a responsibility to speak out.

Domestic violence is a crime. It is against the law.

Please contact Domestic Abuse Support Service (DASS) if you live anywhere in Cambridgeshire or Peterborough and would like advice or support.

DASS supports victims and survivors of domestic abuse of any gender identity and any sexual orientation.

Survivor support and recovery programmes

There are a number of programmes for survivors running across Cambridgeshire and Peterborough, please visit this page on our website Welcome to Cambridgeshire DASV Partnership (cambsdasv.org.uk)

Please note that some programmes accept referrals from professionals only, the referral information is included on the page.

Cambridgeshire Victim and Witness Hub

The Victims and Witness Hub provide emotional and practical support to standard risk domestic abuse victims. Where there is a need for specialist

DV support they will refer, or signpost (depending on the circumstances) to specialist services.

The Hub can be contacted on 0800 781 6818 (8.00am – 7.00pm, Monday to Friday and 9.00am – 5.00pm on Saturdays) or via email victimandwitnesshub@cambs.police.uk.

Further information about the support they can provide, the process for getting support and useful organisations is available on their website.

https://www.cambsvictimservices.co.uk/support-for-victims

The Victims and Witness Hub is a free service offered by Cambridgeshire Constabulary which can provide support for anyone affected by crime whether reported or not. The Hub is made up of skilled Victim and Witness Care Coordinators who will discuss your needs and agree a tailored support package with you based on your specific needs and personal circumstances.

This will cover a range of practical and emotional support that you can receive including organising face to face support from a trained Victims' Hub Community Volunteer and help to access other external support organisations.

Independent Domestic Violence Advisory Service (IDVA Service)

If you are felt to be at high risk of harm from domestic abuse, a professional such as a Social Worker or Police can refer your case to the IDVA Service. An IDVA provides short-term, one-to-one support to help keep you, and any children you have, safe.

IDVAs can help with issues around housing, benefits, liaising with police and signposting to legal support. We have IDVAs who speak a range of languages, as well as those who support young people subjected to abuse in their own intimate relationships. We also have IDVAs who work closely with Health agencies and Housing providers.

IDVAs are independent from other agencies such as police and social care, although they can liaise with these agencies at your request. An IDVA will work with you to develop a safety plan which can include safety measures in your home or support with moving to somewhere safer.

You cannot self-refer to the IDVA Service, all referrals have to come from a professional.

Scam in Focus - Romance Scams.

What is a romance scam? It is when someone uses an online dating site to develop a relationship with someone for the express purpose of extracting money from them. How does someone become a victim? The scam is run over a long period of time, forging a relationship, gaining trust, until they feel the victim is sufficiently enamoured with the scammer to send money when it is asked for.

Signs: - A friend or family member may be involved are they exhibiting secretive behaviour, making excuses why they haven't met in person, Sudden and strong attachment to someone they haven't met, and have only just started talking to. These are some of the things to look out for.

Remember, these people are professional relationship builders. They will make you feel special and say all the right things because that is how they gain your trust and build the relationship with you.

How to protect yourself: - Alarm bells should ring If -You like the person and they ask you to chat off the site.

If you attempt to arrange to meet, but they keep making excuses why they can't. They will usually be out of the country for some reason, and it will all sound very plausible. If they ask for money or any personal documentation, then that is a sure sign the person is not on the dating site genuinely. If you find yourself getting really defensive about questions from loved ones and friends. If they are concerned there is probably a legitimate reason, especially. Conduct a reverse image search on one of the search engines. If the search engine returns an image like the one seen on the dating profile, do a bit more research around the picture. It could be a photograph from a company website

"Why would someone wait this long to scam me". The longer the scam goes on the more you will get attached to the person, the more money you are likely to spend. Remember that the sums sent from a single person have been £30,000. This is a good yearly wage, and this is multiplied by the number of people they are scamming, they can scam several people at the same time

Examples of the type of job they will have: - Remember, they will be working out of the country so they may be on an oil rig, be a doctor working abroad, or they could be in the military. They need to be out of the country as a reason why they can't meet you, and then when they ask for money, for example, they need money for a flight home, or to pay medical fees, or they have lost their credit cards, it will all sound plausible.

Payments: - Credit cards, banks and PayPal all have ways of protecting their customers, and transactions can be reversed. So, you will be asked to send money via ways where the receiver can remain anonymous and the transfer is not reversable. If you haven't heard of their way they are asking you to send money, or it isn't something you have done before, then it is another red flag.

At the end of the day this is a job to these people. So another tell tale sign is they only chat with you their equivalent of 9-5, don't forget they live all over the world in different time zones, so it may look like they are chatting when they get home from work, but in reality they are in a different time zone. English may not be their first language so if they are saying they are from Wales, and their English isn't good, then that is another flag that something may be wrong.

STOP! Take time to think! Could you be a Victim of Romance Fraud?

If you think you've been a victim of a scam, don't feel ashamed or embarrassed - you are not alone. Contact your bank immediately and report it to Action Fraud on 0300 123 2040 or via actionfraud.police.uk.
